Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says:
"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peruna has done for me.

"I suffered for See years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the difwreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used lifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage. Armitage.

MOTHER OF SIXTEEN CHILDREN

Case in Which Poverty Is No Bar t Happiness. In a little white cottage that stands upon an elevated piece of ground facing the river bed, and known as 158 North Myers street, lives Mrs. Claus Henry Koch and thirteen of her sixteen children. Three boys have left the homestead and are in Eastern cities preparing for lives of future usefulness. One is studying for the ministry and the other two are working their way through college. Mrs. Koch is robust and healthy, with that sincere, earnest way of expressing herself that leaves not the shadow of a doubt in one's mind as to her veracity, and when the writer called to ask if she would furnish him with some data concerning her large brood she smiled radiantly.

INCIDENTS AND ANECDOTES OF THE WAR.

Bursting Bombs, Bloody Battles, Camp Fire, Festive Bugs, Etc., Etc. "As to that Man on Horseback at Kenesaw," said Major George Green, he could not have come from Mitchell's brigade. I was at that time a field officer in the Seventy-Eighth Illinois Infantry in Mitchell's brigade, and I am certain that none of the mpossible for any of the mounted officers in McCook's or Mitchell's brigade to have taken their horses over the Union intrenchments for the assault. The lines of both brigades were formed behind our own breastworks, which were six or sevan feet high, and it required great effort on the part of the soldiers to get over them. After we were over we straightened our lines and went forward. Who the man on horseback was and how he came to be in front is certainly a mportance, but it is very interesting." "It certainly is," said Comrade William Stewart, of Pittwood, Ill. When the battle of Kenesaw was ought I was a member of company C. Fifty-First Illinois infantry. I saw General Harker when he fell from his orse, and I cannot agree with the officer who says Harker rode a white horse. My recollection is that he rode a bay horse, and I was close enough to see clearly. He was shot not far from the rebel works and within a few minutes after we reached the brush in front of the works.

"I was with the front line, and while we waited for the main line to come up I stood behind a big tree and turned my back toward it to load. Looking back, I saw Harker on a bay horse waving his men forward. Then the bugle sounded and the rush began, and Harker was shot. I was close to the rebel works, and on Mc-Cook's left. Harker fell to my right about fifty feet, and not more than one hundred feet to the rear. This does not agree with the stories told by some of our boys, but it brings Harker within range of the position held by Major Eakin." "And yet," said the Captain, "Comrade Stewart does not locate General Harker where Major Eakin placed the officer on a dark chestnut sorrel in McCook's right. Stewart places the spot where Harker fell close to Mc-Cook's left, and this corresponds with the recollection of Rilea, who saw Harker pass from right to left through McCook's brigade.

controversy as to where Harker fell. There was great confusion on that day, and, so far as I know, not a single official report, regimental, brigade, or division, makes more than a general reference to Harker's death. General O. O. Howard, in an article on the battle, quotes Sherman as saying that if Harker and McCook had not been killed be believed that the men of those brigades would have broken through the rebel lines. But no one says where Harker was kill-

"In the journal kept by Colonel Joseph S. Fullerton," said the Major, "there is a definite statement as to where General Harker fell. Fullerton was Adjutant General at headquarters of the Fourth Army Corps and he kept a running record of events as they occurred, giving hour and day. Under date of 9:30 a. m., June 27, 1864, he says: 'Colonel Bradley, in command of Harker's brigade, sends word by Colonel Opdyke that General Harker has been mortally wounded; shot from his horse while he was within fifteen paces of the enemy's works.' In a general way this corresponds "James Lavery, of Steubenville, quarters and get the countersign." Whistling Bullets, Bright Bayonets, Brothers Hold a Reunion. "Land of mercy, you're not John Dory! Why, I thought that you have been dead these many years." Such was the greeting that Joseph Dory received from his brother, John Dory, Sunday morning, after a separation of forty-five years. The brothers had not seen each other since August 7, 1858, when they were boys together on a farm in Madison county, mounted officers left their horses in Illinois, twenty-five miles east of St. the rear and went into the engagement

> Joseph Dory left the farm and went o Missouri. When the war broke out everal years later he joined the Union orces and combatted the rebel guer-Illa fighters for a long time. Then he enlisted in the naval service and was assigned to the Black Hawk, one of the vessels in the Mississippi flor tilla. John Dory came to Indiana and enlisted in the Sixty-Ninth Indiana. He went through the whole war with Company A.

When hostilities ceased and the brothers were mustered out they had lost track of each other. Then began mystery. The matter is not of great a search which lasted forty-five years, and only ended Sunday, when Joseph Dory called at the home of his brother at 418 Blackford street. The long-lost brother was met at the door by John, who did not recognize him, but from a Grand Army button that he wore in his coat lapel John thought him an old comrade in arms.

Joseph asked many questions about John's boyhood days and then it began to dawn on John that there was something strangely familiar about his questioner's appearance. John recognized the family mouth and in the eyes he saw traces of a mild expression that he once knew so well. Falling in each other's arms, they embraced each other tenderly.

In telling of his efforts to locate John, Joseph Dory stated that he traveled all over the Middle West. He had talked with many old soldiers who had known John but none of them could give any information as to his whereabouts. The strongest circumstance is the fact that Joseph Dory attended the national encamp ment of the Grand Army veterans which was held in Indianapolis a number of years ago, and failed to locate his brother. John Dory says that he was on the streets every day and attended all the reunions. The two brothers were so near and yet so far apart. Joseph claims that he could not find his brother's name in the city directory at the time.

He gave him up for lost and despaired ever seeing him again. On Saturday Joseph Dory was in Decatur on business and he concluded that he "Harker was well known to the men of his own brigade. He always would make one more effort to locate ing into the local directory for 1903, immediately revived on being told that he had only moved two doors farther down the street. > A Gallant Soldier. A great many members of Congress and citizens of less prominence, went out with McDowell's army from Washington, on July 21, 1861, to "see the rebel arms knocked into smithereens, and sent flying to the Southward." But alas, the best laid plans of mice gang aft a'glee, and the knocking was on the other side, and the flying in the other direction. A large number of citizens, as well as soldiers, were capured by the Confederates and as the former were in great doubt as to their fate, many of them sought to curry favor with their captors by declaring that they were not opposed to the South-indeed, they wanted it inferred that they rather favored the disruption of the Union. Commenting on this want of backbone, the Richmond

bligation to Perform Their Work. Few people, even in San Francisco. have a correct idea of the Chinese highbinder and the cause of the fre quent wars in the Chinese quarter. The word highbinder is, perhaps, a localism, and it has no special meaning. It was applied by the police to the societies of Chinese assassins because they dld not know the names of the societies. According to the statements of a Christianized-Chinese to one of the mission teachers, there are in this city several such societies, with a membership of from fifty to perhaps 200 each. They have names insional assassins and will kill anyone

They are bound by oaths, like Carbonnaira of Italy, and a traitor meets death at the hands of one of the members, who is selected by lot. wood, which will serve for many years The organizations differ in detail, but the main objects of all is the same movement and of surface meiting. -to rob and murder. The organization of one of the largest highbinder societles in the Chinese quarter is partly described by this Christianized Chinaman, who was certainly a member, but who said that his "consin" told him. They are a chief, a second chief, a sec retary, an "introducer" and eight swordsmen. The candidate for admission unplaits his queue, indicating his ly not a likely source for fairy tales; abject submission to his superior offi-

He is then led into the room by the official introducer, a red robe is thrown over him and he is required to kneel under an arch of eight swords. One of these swordsmen places the blade of a sword upon the back of the can didate's neck as an indication of his fate if he betrays his associates. The chief, dressed in red, sits on a small platform, which is draped in the same color and to his right is the book containing the oaths, passwords and signs of the order. In a raid a few years ago the police captured one of these books and had it translated. The so ciety then adopted a new manual. There are a number of oaths, the principal one binding the members to obey the orders of the society without ques tion, and the rules prescribe penalties

When the candidate is taking the oath his finger is pierced with a needle and the blood drops into a glass of wine held by the member who stands sponsor for him. They both drink from this glass, signifying that they are of the same society and of the same "blood relationship." The grips and passwords are then communicated to him and he is now a full-fiedged highbinder-an assassin for pay.

When the society receives a com mission to kill a man a good hatchet man is selected to do the bloody work. Or. If it is a war, the society details a number of its best shots. The blood money goes into the common fund and is used for the defense of criminals care of the wounded and pensions is sent to the State prison. The surplus is divided according to the rank and services rendered. If a highbinder is killed while in the discharge of his bloody work the society gives him a large funeral, seeds his bones to China members in trouble and will fee a lawyer as long as it has a dollar or can get funds by forced loans or threats of assassination.

These societies levy tribute upon merchants, and if not paid robbery or, perhaps, assassination follows. They terrorize the depraved women and collect from them sums weekly; also from the owners of these women. If the owner refuses to be blackmailed they steal or forcibly take one of his women and hold her for a reward or sell her to some other bagnlo-keeper. Sometimes the bagnlo-keeper hires a rival society to protect his dens. Then there is a war between two highbinder societies.

When one society invades the district of another a war is the result. The rival hands of outlaws have the Chinese quarter divided, and it is a violation of treaty to plunder or murder grocers. in each other's territory. The gaming-houses are also a steady source of revenue, paying an agreed sum weekly to be let alone. The highbinder societies are a terror to the merchants, who would gladly see them driven out of the city. Then peace would reign in the Chinese quarter. -San Francisco News Letter.

The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pink-ham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared

Read What Mrs. Weisslitz Says. DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:- For two years my life was simply a burden, I suffered so with female troubles, and pains across my back and loins. The doctor told me that I had kidney troubles and prescribed for me. For three months I took his medicines, but grew steadily worse. My husband then advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought home a bottle. It is the greatest blessing ever brought to our home. Within three months I was a changed woman. My pain had disappeared, my complexion became clear, my eyes bright, and my entire system in good shape."—Mrs. Paula Weisslitz, 176 Seneca St., Buffalo, N. Y. Proof that Kidney Trouble can be Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: - I feel very thankful to you for the good your medicine has done me. I had doctored for years and was steadily growing worse. I had trouble with my kidneys, and two doctors told me I had Bright's disease; also had falling of the womb, and could not walk a block at a time. My back and head ached all the time, and I was so nervous I could not sleep; had hysteria and fainting spells, was tired all the time, had such a pain in my left side that I could hardly stand at times without putting my foot on something.

"I doctored with several good doctors, but they did not help me any.

I took, in all, twelve bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, five boxes of Liver Pills, and used three packages of Sanative Wash, and feel like a new woman, can eat and sleep well, do all my own work, and can walk two miles without feeling over tired. The doctors tell me that my kidneys are all right now. I am so happy to be well, and I feel that I owe it all to your medicine."—Mrs. Oral. Strong, Dalton, Mass.

A Horrible Doubt. A certain New York literary light. who boasts of a city hospital and six vocal studios within a stone's throw of his quarters, was being condoled with the other day by a friend who happened to be present at some of a singer's excruciatingly high C's.

"Why, man, this is terrible," said the would-be comforter. "Yes." said the scribe, "but I don't believe it would be quite so bad if there was only, some way of telling which was opera and which was opera-
